General Party to Arrive In Greencastle Saturday; Parents Were at Bedside Last Night

Greencastle friends were stunned to learn of the death of Jess McAnally, age 21 years, early today in Petoskey, Mich., following a heart attack. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McAnally, city, who had been summoned to his bedside.

A dispatch from Petoskey stated that young McAnally arrived there Saturday on a vacation trip from Chicago. He became ill and was forced to enter a Petoskey hospital on Monday. His condition became critical and his parents were notified. Neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. McAnally said today that he had not been feeling very well summer.

According to a telegram received from Paul F. Boston, superintendent of the city schools, the funeral party will arrive in Greencastle Saturday.
In addition to the parents, Jess is survived by a sister, Mrs. Robert Murray, residing in Chicago and a younger brother, John, who were also at his bedside.

Jess was one of the greatest basketball players to ever don a Greencastle high school uniform. He played the finals of the state tournament four straight years, being honored for his junior year by receiving the Gimbell award and being named as all-state center during his senior and senior years. The Gimbell award is presented to the player displaying the best sportsmanship and general ability. During state tourney play, the Greencastle boy was called "Gentleman Jess," which in itself was a mark of his actions and popularity with the thousands of fans over Indiana. He was also an excellent student and was held in high esteem by his teachers.

Following his graduation in 1933, he went to Evanston, Ill., and enrolled in Northwestern university where he was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. During his sophomore year, he played on the Northwestern basketball squad and was one of the main-stays of the team.

Republicans Had Rally Thursday

OFFICERS ELECTED DURING MEETING AT COURTHOUSE; GABLES IS SPEAKER

Prof. Luther Gables of the Republican headquarters, Chicago, addressed a meeting of the Republican Volunteers of Putnam county last night at a meeting held in the courthouse. A crowd of more than three hundred people were present.

County Republican chairman, Gilbert E. Ogles, presided over a brief business meeting which followed the address during which the following county officers of the Volunteers were elected: Rex Crask, Greencastle, president; Mrs. Clifford Reeves, Washington township, secretary; and vice-presidents, Omer C. Akers, Franklin and Jackson townships; Leland Torr, Madison township; Wayne Bettis, Clinton township; Mrs.
Lottie Sackett, Cloverdale and Warren townships; Mrs. Ida Bowen, Marion and Jefferson townships; Paul Frederick, Floyd and Monroe townships; and Percy Masten, William Robbins, George Williams, Milton Brown, and Ralph West, all of Greencastle.

Mr. Gables asserted in his talk that more than fifty bills to put congressional power above that of the United States Supreme Court are pending now—waiting until the coming presidential election is over before being pushed through.

"President Roosevelt, in planning this is discarding his campaign promises as he repudiated his oath to defend and respect the constitution," Gables said. "The president is attempting to destroy the fundamentals of the government which put him in power."

"The law of supply and demand will make prosperity a matter of course in any intelligent country," Prof. Gables continued, "and we don't need European ideas of regimentation or a dictator."

SIXTH WEEK OF SPANISH REVOLUTION

MAIN FIGHTING TODAY IN CIVIL WAR CENTERED
AT IRUN

LOYALISTS REPULSE REBELS

White Flags Reported Fluttering On Homes In Oviedo, Held by Rebel Forces

LISBON, Aug. 28, (UP)—Spain's civil war was a confusion of battles, sieges, marches and counter-marches, complicated by conflicting wireless claims of victory, as its sixth week ended today.

The main fighting was at Irun, key to the San Sebastian area, where rebels for the third day attacked the city and still had not penetrated it or, apparently, weakened the loyalist defense.

White flags were seen fluttering from private homes on the outskirts of rebel-held Oviedo in the north, and they were believed an indication that the civil population was weakening in the face of the long nerve wracking siege by Asturias miners.

The Madrid government announced the arrival of Marcel Rosenberg, Russia's first ambassador to Spain since the world war.

It was regarded an important diplomatic movement at a time when other countries are emptying their embassies and some even closing them.

Today's war news opened with a rebel radio claim of a victory of importance in the Guadarrama mountains northwest of Madrid. It was asserted that rebels killed many of the militiamen of the brilliant loyalist commandant Gen. Julio Mangada holding the Navalperal area. If true, this was a new development.

A loyalist broadcast said that 85 220-pound bombs were dropped onto buildings occupied at Oviedo by the rebels.

United Press Correspondent Robert Jones at Zaragoza disclosed the organization of a rebel column of 10-000 men ready to be sent against the Catalonian militiamen who have been preparing for a month to besiege the city.

But authoritative sources on both sides admitted that little of moment outside the San Sebastian fighting, was in progress.

Reynolds Parkard, United Press correspondent with the rebel forces in the north, who has been in intimate touch with the situation there, asserted today that the government had so strengthened its Guadarrama mountain positions that it might prove the rebels missed entirely their chance to take the city from the north.

Observers of the northern fighting,

Local Girls At State 4-H School

WILL COMPETE FOR COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP AT STATE FAIR GROUNDS

Mary Virginia Young of Greencastle and Evelyn South of Monroe township left Greencastle today to represent Putnam county 4-H club members at the eighteenth annual Indiana State Fair school of home economics. The school, conducted under the auspices of the Indiana Board of Agriculture, will be held in the Women's building of the State Fair ground, August 28 to September 11.
Two representatives will enroll from each county.

The girls won the privilege to attend this event by gaining the highest 4-H work and leadership scores in the county.

Through the cooperation of the higher institutions of learning in the state and other interested parties, the Indiana Board of Agriculture offers scholarships to several state schools as awards for the best work in this school. General class work, housekeeping, the notebook covering the school's activities, general attitude, 4-H club record and high school grades all enter into the judging for these scholarships.

In addition to the regular demonstrations in cooking, table service, bed making, and home care of the sick, there will be special lectures on home decoration, textiles, music, art and literature.

Everything on the fair grounds is open and free to the girls. One day will be spent sight seeing in Indianapolis. There will be a "stunt night," musical, conservation slides, games and play, and all sorts of home talent shows.

MEETING SATURDAY

There will be a meeting of the board of public works and safety with Mr. Barnaby, president of the American Solvent Co., builders of the city disposal plant, at the office of Mayor Charles Zeis, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Barnaby and the board will try to reach a settlement of their differences at this time. The meeting is public and any interested citizen is invited to attend.

Former mayor W. L. Denman and members of the former board of public works and safety are requested to be present and participate in the meeting.

PRESIDENT INSPECTS DUST BOWL

DISCUSSES DROUGHT CONDI-TIONS WITH FARMERS
IN NORTH DAKOTA

ABOARD ROOSEVELT SPECIAL, Aug. 28, (UP)—President Roosevelt, convinced the government is faced with not one but three problems in the sun-baked area of ruined crops and swirling dust, moved from Bismarck to Jamestown, N. D., today.

He will head for Aberdeen, S. D., in the afternoon.

Mr. Roosevelt set out on a tour of his own the first day of his dust bowl visit, driving into the very yards of embattled farmers who, overall-clad and hat in hand, painted in their simple words a vivid picture of the effects of a searing sun and no rainfall on their crops.

"What I have seen," the president said on his return, "confirms me in the belief that I have had for a long time—the belief that we are going to win on this problem."

"It really comes down to three problems," he explained.

"The first is the immediate one of keeping people going who have lost their crops and lost their livestock.
The second is to keep them going over the winter until next year when we hope we will have more rain."

"The third problem relates not only to the future of North Dakota but to the future of a good many other states. It relates to working out a plan of cooperation with nature instead of going along with what we have been doing in the past—trying to buck nature."

The chief executive yesterday listened first to the governors, United States senators, and other officials of both North Dakota and Montana before sitting at the conference table to receive the findings of the great plains drought committee.

Facts, figures, and recommendations calling for the projection of a long-range drought prevention program through state and federal cooperation were laid out before him.

Inferentially, Mr. Roosevelt assured the Dakotans that there was no intention of the government to move them to other parts. He said:
"I had a hunch, and it was a right one, that when I got out here I would find that you people had your chins up; that you are not looking forward to the day when this country would be populated, but that you and your children expect to remain here."

"A few days ago I was passing through one of the greatest industrial centers in the United States, Gary, Indiana, where you pass through miles and miles of steel factories. I told them there what is perfectly true, that your problem out here is their problem back there because the perfectly obvious fact is that steel factories would not run at full capacity unless the agricultural states were in a position to buy farm implements and other products of the steel mills."

"I have learned a great deal today and I am going to learn more in the next few days. I get a picture which reassures me as to the future of the so-called great plains drought area—reassurance of the fact that the federal government can and must and will go ahead—not only the federal government but the state government and the local government—go ahead with winning out through a system of careful long-range planning."

Mr. Roosevelt then paused and in conclusion, remarked:

"And again I say that you are not licked."

The presidential special on which the chief executive has been holding his drought conferences, pulled out of Bismarck at 6:00 CST., for Jamestown.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Havens and children of Northwood, have returned home from Denver, Colo.

Jailed On Bad Check Charge

CHARLIE TRAIL, ARRESTED BY MARSHAL GRAHAM THURS-DAY AFTERNOON

Charlie Trail, age fifty-four, was arrested and confined to the local jail by Marshal Lawrence Graham late Thursday afternoon on a charge of passing fraudulent checks in Greencastle.

Trail is on parole from the Indiana state prison where he was sentenced November 4, 1934, to serve a one to five year term for grand larceny.

Marshal Graham said Trail cashed a check for $8 against Tom Sage on the Central National Bank at Plec-nor's drug store last Saturday. Later, the marshal stated, Trail tried to cash an $8 check against Prof. F. C.
Tilden at Cliff Monnett's grocery store in south Greencastle. Monnett became suspicious and refused to meet the check. He later notified the city police, who investigated.

Trail was apprehended at his camp on Big Walnut Creek. A parole officer will remove the man to the state prison, it was said.

Credit Association Hears "Sales" Talk

Louis H. Buisch of Dayton, Ohio, delivered an address on "Salesmanship" to nearly fifty members of the Putnam County Credit Association

ning at the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Buisch spoke of the aid of a number of charts to more forcefully bring out the featured points of his talk. He spoke directly to the retail merchant in a plain and frank manner, specifying many valuable leads to better selling.

Several of Mr. Buisch's listeners, stating that the talk was one of the best they ever heard.

SEC. OF WAR TO BE BURIED AT SALT LAKE

MILITARY SERVICES PLANNED TOMORROW AT CAPITAL FOR
GEORGE H. DERN

FORMER UTAH GOVERNOR

Death of Secretary of War Occurred Yesterday Following Month's Illness

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Army guns throughout the land and half way around the world boomed in mourning today for George H. Dern, secretary of war.

The 64-year old cabinet officer, who made a fortune in mining and twice was governor of Utah before President Roosevelt appointed him as the army's chief, died at 10:55 a. m. yesterday in Walter Reed hospital.
He had been taken there July 13 after becoming ill while inspecting army engineering projects.

Military funeral services will be conducted in Mount Pleasant Congregational church here Saturday. Accompanied by high officials and a guard of honor, the secretary's body will be taken by special train to Salt Lake City, Utah, for burial.

President Roosevelt, who received word of the death at an unscheduled stop on his western drought tour, will attend the Masonic burial services Tuesday.

The cause of Dern's death was described in a war department announcement as cardiac and kidney complications, following a severe attack of influenza which weakened his entire physical condition.

Mrs. Dern and his two daughters and three sons were at his bedside when he died. He had been attended by two army physicians and a European heart specialist, summoned by the president.

Dern fought valiantly against death and rallied several times after his condition had become critical.

War department officials said physicians told them he slipped into a coma about 9 o'clock Wednesday night. He was put under an oxygen tent but gradually weakened.

On learning of his war chief's passing, President Roosevelt directed that Secretary Hull issue a proclamation designating the death "a national bereavement" and ordering flags on all public buildings in the District of Columbia and the state of Utah at half staff.

The war department sent messages at all posts of the military establishment in this country, Alaska, Panama, Hawaii, the Philippines and Tientsin (China) to observe thirty days' mourning. All officers will wear a mourning band on their arms and sabers.

Cannon at army posts boomed a salute to the secretary, beginning at sunrise this morning and continuing at half hour intervals until sunset.
At retreat a salute of nineteen guns will be fired.

At high noon on the day of the funeral cannon at all army posts will fire a farewell salute of nineteen guns.

The secretary will be buried in the state where—as a farm boy from Nebraska, the son of German immigrants, he entered the mining industry and later served as a legislator and governor.

Army regulations would not permit burial in Arlington National Cemetery. Only soldiers and sailors who have served in the nation's defense forces may be interred there.

The funeral train will arrive at Kroger scored twelve runs in the fifth and sixth innings to take the opening ball game last night from Fillmore 16 to 5. Twelve Fillmore errors were largely responsible for Fillmore's down fall.

After playing four innings of scoreless ball, the Merchants broke loose with a five run attack in the fifth inning to take the final tilt from Coca Cola 8 to 1. Stites, who pitched for the Merchants, held Coca Cola to five hits.

WARNED OF LAVA FLOW

HONOLULU, (UP)—Sunset colors and planetary positions, as well as movements of the sun and moon, held the keys to weather and seismic disturbances for Brother Othmar of St. Louis College, Honolulu.

Brother Othmar, who seems headed for a reputation as great as that of Father Richard, late famed "padre of the rains" at Santa Clara college, California, already has listed a probable series of events for Hawaii this year. He predicts a major eruption of the volcano Mauna Loa on the island in February, 1937.

He also has predicted a flood in the Nuuanu valley above Honolulu in September, and continuation of rainy weather in Honolulu proper all summer.

Next February the planets Jupiter, Saturn and Venus will be in superior conjunction, with only the moon between them and the earth.

"There is going to be a lot of fun when this happens, and Hawaii can expect another major eruption," he says.

A fiery, blotchy-red sunset in Tahiti may be followed shortly by typhoons in the distant Philippines, according to Brother Othmar. He said that "red" sunsets seen for five months in Hawaii in 1933 likewise followed a terrific earthquake in Japan.

"The stars can talk if you can only listen long enough," he cryptically contends.

Jupiter controls earthquake movements, he insists. Once, he says, he noticed the Pleiades were shining with unusual brilliance. Within a short time a severe storm struck, and after the storm had passed the constellation could be seen but dimly, indicating the storm originated in its direction.

FRENCH VESSELS SUNK BY NELSON MAY BE FLOATED

SPEZIA, Italy, (UP)—Two of Napoleon's fleet of ships which were sunk by Nelson in the Bay of Aboukir on Aug. 1, 1798, may once more float on the Mediterranean.

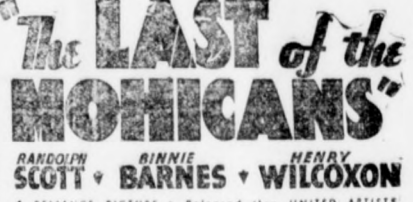

An Italian engineer, Franco Seminati, has been entrusted by a French syndicate with the difficult task of locating and raising the vessels, which are believed to lie about 75 miles northeast of Alexandria in the delta of the Nile.

It is believed the two ships are buried under tons of sand and mud, and therefore, once they have been located, weeks of hard work will be required to raise them. Seminati estimates that altogether the job will take a year.

The two sunken vessels are believed to be loaded with gold, silver and artistic treasures of great value taken from the ancient tombs at Alexandria.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
In the massacre of Fort William Henry, (1757) Colonel Munro, commanding the Fort, is killed and his daughters, Cora and Alice, carried into captivity by the Hurons. Hawkeye, an American hunter, and Major Heyward, who for Alice, set out in pursuit. With them are their Mohican allies, Chingachgook and his son, Uncas. Uncas rescues Cora but is killed by Magua, Huron Chief. Cora hurries herself over a cliff to escape Magua. Magua is in turn killed by Chingachgook. To save Alice, Heyward and Hawkeye both offer themselves as prisoners to the Hurons. Heyward claiming to be the much sought after Hawkeye.

Chapter XII

WHICH IS HAWKEYE?

The Hurons stared at both men in bewilderment.

"Do you want proof?" asked Hawkeye. "Then bring us a rifle." The Sachem frowned. And then, as he caught the drift of Hawkeye's plan, he smiled and nodded.

Hawkeye's Trial

"Pick your target, Major," said Hawkeye grinning.

Heyward was sober. "The ground by the door," he suggested.

"That," said Hawkeye scornfully. "Why I could spit in it." He looked around, and then spoke in the Huron tongue to one of the warriors. "Put a clay jug on that stake."

The distance was so great that in the torchlight the jug was barely visible. Heyward was incredulous.

"You mean to try to hit that by torchlight?"

The Sachem eyed both men grimly. "Hawkeye will hit it," he said.

Heyward frowned, but lifted the rifle and took careful aim. The bullet whistled the jug, leaving only a small fragment on the stake. The Hurons murmured their approval. This was surely Hawkeye.

But the real Hawkeye only smiled, grasped the rifle and let the barrel drop carelessly in his palm. The piece was fired as if by impact. The fragment disappeared.

The Hurons now whooped their approval, their animosity apparently forgotten, as they crowded around Hawkeye to congratulate him on his shot. The Sachem glared at Heyward.

"You creep into village and lie like a singing bird. Take squaw and her babies go look for you."

Alice was led forward and released. She stepped up to Hawkeye with a little cry, but he spoke rapidly, urgently.

"You have until sunrise before they start after you. Chingachgook's watching. He'll find you and take you to safety. He's not to come back for me. My orders, Major. Do you understand? You have Miss Munro to think of."

Alice flung her arms around Hawkeye and began to kiss him passionately. The guards pulled her away.

"Go!" ordered the Sachem. With Chingachgook as their guide, Heyward and Alice trudged silently through the forest. Alice began to weep.

"Father—Cora—Uncas— and now Hawkeye—the greatest spirit of them all."

Heyward nodded a gloomy assent. Suddenly Chingachgook, a few paces ahead, stopped short. "What is it?" asked Heyward in alarm.

"Many come. Yengeese. Heyward shouted joyfully. They plunged through the underbrush to meet their rescuers.

Hawkeye, bound to the stake, stripped to the waist, viewed quietly the preparations for his torture. Around his feet the brushwood was piled to his knees. The Indian warriors sat in rows around him, watching his face keenly for signs of weakness. Screams of delight came from the squaws as an old hag brought in a burning brand and set fire to the brushwood. The smoke began to curl around Hawkeye's body.

Despite his anxiety to affirm the honor of his race, Hawkeye squirmed slightly. A squaw stepped up and placed a burning pine needle on his arm. He groaned. The Indians began to laugh and jeer.

Hawkeye shook his head. "Uncas, now," he reasoned, "would have shown you how a warrior can die. But it's not a white man's gift to stand pain and not show."

A volley rang out. Several Indians plunged forward. The others leaped up and rushed for their arms. The women and children scattered, screaming. The surprise was, however, complete, and the Hurons were completely unable to form any defense. Chingachgook bounded forward, Heyward close on his heels. While the Major kicked away the burning brands, Chingachgook slashed away the bonds with his knife. Hawkeye reeled forward groggily into Heyward's arms.

"Thanks, Major," he said hoarsely. "Getting a little warm."

"I was always sure you were born to hang," the Major answered grimly.

Hawkeye's rescuers were part of an advance column under General Abercrombie. Regulations were regulations, and having saved Hawkeye from death by torture, they now held court-martial over him, preparatory to his hanging.

Strangely enough, however, he found an able defender in Major Heyward, who was presumably pressing the charges.

"He did instigate the men leaving the Fort," Heyward argued. "But let me recall to you that had he not, those men would never have met your command to save them from an Ottawa ambush, and you, General Abercrombie, might not be here to pass judgment on him. Also it is true he struck an officer. I am that officer, so you may believe me when I say that if he is guilty of insubordination, I am guilty of exceeding my command by roasting him to it."

General Abercrombie smiled. "May I ask, Major, if you stand before this court as his accuser, or his defense?"

"Neither, General—I am merely telling the whole truth."

"Since you are so familiar with the case," the General said, "I would welcome a recommendation."

"I would recommend that he be attached to the British army as a scout."

The time had come for parting. Major Heyward was to return to England. And Alice? She waited for Hawkeye's word.

But Hawkeye had come to a decision. His way led into the wilderness, to paths as yet untrod by the paleface. He was a pathfinder, a pioneer. And his life was not the life for a delicate English girl, used to the ways of the civilized world. His word was—goodbye.

"But you once said you loved me."

"I do—I always shall. And that is why I say goodbye."

And so Alice was left behind to wave sad farewell as Hawkeye stepped in his place in the British column, Chingachgook by his side. An officer roared a command: "Forward! On to Canada!"

LAND PLANES FAVORED FOR NEW TRANS-PACIFIC ROUTE

HONOLULU, (UP) — Fast land planes, instead of heavier and slower seaplanes may be used on America's proposed new air route from Honolulu to New Zealand and Australia, according to William T. Miller, superintendent of airways of the United States department of commerce.

Miller is aboard the coast guard cutter Itasca on a tour of the three little islands of Baker, Jarvis and Howland which are to serve as bases and intermediary stops for the new service. Before leaving, however, he indicated that there are three specific reasons why it is likely that land planes farther than sea planes will be used on the new 5,000 mile route to the Antipodes. These are:

The islands already have landing areas that could be used in an emergency even in their present condition. Water surrounding the islands is too rough for seaplanes to make a safe landing and tie up for refueling and inspection.

The federal government on the next trip of the Itasca will send a tractor and grading equipment to level off the areas and prepare them for landing fields.

"Even in their present condition," Miller declared, "I would not hesitate to land a plane on any one of the three. The possible landing fields are a mile long, facing directly into the prevailing winds, and are sufficiently wide for all purposes."

"So far as seaplanes basing there, one important factor must be considered. Along the Pan-American Airway route from Honolulu to Manila, the planes are able to land and take off in sheltered lagoons, forming a natural landing area where the coral heads are blasted out. This is true on Midway and Wake particularly. But unlike those two islands, Baker, Jarvis and Howland have no lagoons whatever. The sea beats directly on the shore, the surf booming and piling up at some seasons of the year until a landing even by a boat is dangerous."

Miller declared that the permanent development and colonization of the islands is planned on a serious scale. Washington officials are or their way there on the present trip of the Itasca to erect an administrative and other permanent buildings. Materials for these were carried aboard the Itasca.

"That the federal government is taking a long range view of this work, is indicated," Miller declared, "by the fact that part of the Itasca's cargo consisted of hundreds of small trees and thousands of seeds. These trees and seeds will be planted on each of the three islands where the colonies will have such plants as purple and yellow passion fruit, sea grapes, breadfruit, Hawaiian oranges, cashew nuts and ironwoods. These orchards in themselves will furnish a certain native food supply to the colonists."

Miller pointed out that the federal government's colonization project on the three islands will be operated on a continuing basis.

"The project is permanent," he said. "It is a vanguard of commercial aviation linking America with the Antipodes, just as the present air route of Pan-American from Honolulu to Manila links America and the Orient.

"When flying equipment is ready, essential weather data will be ready. Complete weather stations are being established this trip on Jarvis and Howland with instruments for both ground and upper-air observations. Baker Island, being but a short distance south of Howland, will have instruments for surface observation only.

"When the full story of this colonization of the tiny mid-Pacific islands is told in years to come, the young American school boys of Honolulu will take their places along with the heroes of the American migration to the west."

Commander Fletcher W. Brown of the Itasca probably has seen more than any other man of the actual colonization.

It was the Itasca that took to the islands the first groups of Hawaiian youths who established the weather observation stations there necessary for a knowledge of Pacific weather conditions for trans-Pacific airlines and began the first work of colonization.

It also was the Itasca that maintained constant contact with the little groups and eventually replaced them with fresh colonizers from Hawaii.

"You may be interested in knowing," declares Commander Brown, "that already the appearance of these little sandy spots on the equator is changing. Coconut palms that we planted there on one of our first trips, are flourishing and add a bit of shade already. They will soon serve also as an added source of food supply. In the meantime, constructions, tents, weather service stations and other additions of civilization are rapidly changing what was formerly mere sand specks into the appearance of an advance guard of civilization."

Wednesday, Sept. 9 State Fair Educational Day

State Fair officials have announced that Wednesday, September 9th, will be Educational day at the 1936 Indiana State Fair to be held from September 5 to 11, inclusive. A feature of Educational day is the parade of champions in which most champions in their respective divisions will march on the famous mile track led by several bands beginning at 11:00 A. M. The Indiana Board of Education has announced any pupil or teacher attending the fair Educational day will not be counted absent.

A new building 80 feet in width and 120 feet in length has been completed where all exhibits and displays of school buses, instructional supplies, visual aids, work books and equipment will be on display.

The outstanding feature of the educational exhibit is the log school house, the frame school, and the modern school. School, typical of the age these buildings represent, will be conducted each day of the fair with pupils and teachers dressed in appropriate costumes.

Contests will be conducted for the best miniature airplane and the best-dressed doll, with cash prizes being awarded the winners. State fair visitors should not miss the educational exhibit.

THEATER NEED RATED TOO BIG FOR BROADWAY

WIDE DEVELOPMENT URGED OF NON-PROFESSIONAL PROJECTS

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (UP) — Since show producers agree that experimenting on Broadway is too costly and precarious, other channels must be found, says Barrett H. Clark, of the Dramatists Guild.

Here for the Mohawk Drama Festival which is presenting a number of dramatic plays, Clark said:

"Simply because circumstances have deprived us of the old stock company and reduced the 'road' to a mere memory we need no sit back and say that Broadway is the American theater."

No, he continued, the theater in this country need not necessarily be confined to Broadway; until a few years ago it was not.

Clark urged development of the non-professional theater.

However, he added, that since the turn of the century there "has been developing an increasingly vital tendency to find a substitute for this 'highly centralized show business.'"

Lauding various productions throughout the country, Clark said:

"The old-line professional actor, manager, and playwright occasionally can be heard murmuring contemptuously the word 'amateur,' but you may be sure he never saw one of the really good 'amateur' productions at such places as the Pasadena Community Playhouse, the Dallas Little Theater, or at Northwestern university, the University of Iowa, or the University of Washington."

"The plain truth is that there are 20 so-called little theaters, and as many dramatic companies at the colleges and universities that can put to shame all but the best professionals on Broadway."

Clark said that the work of a better type non-commercial theater is being carried on throughout the country, and that at more educational institutions, young are able to take courses in the theater training.

He quoted Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists Guild, when he reflected upon the disappearance of the old stock company who realize that professional amateur plays have constituted the audience which still persists in the limits of a few large cities for their efforts few of us know west of the Hudson."

"Because of the existence of a new theater world with all its abilities," Clark said, "we can to the best of the Broadway houses as centers for the production of a certain number of new plays by known and unknown
